Napocor awaits decision on debt swap proposal

By Josephine M. ...

MANILA, April 16—The National Power Corporation (Napocor) is awaiting a decision from the Department of Energy (DOE) on its proposal to swap its debt for equity in the power sector.

The DOE is currently reviewing the proposal, which was submitted to it last month. The proposal involves the conversion of Napocor's existing debt into shares of the company, which would then be listed on the Philippine Stock Exchange (PSE).

Napocor officials say that the proposal is a key part of the company's strategy to restructure its balance sheet and improve its financial health. They also say that the proposal is in line with the government's policy to privatize state-owned enterprises.

The DOE is expected to make a decision on the proposal within the next few weeks. If approved, the swap would be a significant step towards the privatization of Napocor.

Science, profit behind the hair

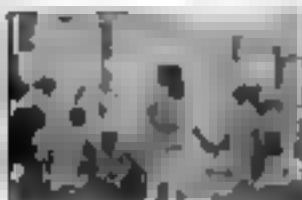

By Bong S. Santos

MANILA — The hair care industry in the Philippines is a multi-billion peso business, and it is growing rapidly. According to a recent survey, the industry is expected to reach a value of P10 billion by 2010. This growth is driven by the increasing demand for hair care products, particularly among the middle and upper classes.

One of the key factors driving this growth is the increasing awareness of hair care among Filipinos. Many people are now realizing the importance of maintaining healthy hair, and this has led to a surge in the use of hair care products. Additionally, the growing middle class is more likely to spend on personal care items, further fueling the industry's expansion.

But big hair hinders

Despite the growth, the industry faces several challenges. One major hurdle is the lack of standardized regulations for hair care products. This has led to a proliferation of low-quality products that can harm consumers' hair. Additionally, the industry is highly competitive, with many small, local businesses vying for market share. To succeed in this market, companies must invest in research and development to create high-quality, effective products.

The diagram illustrates the experimental setup for studying the effect of initial polymer concentration on film morphology. It shows a cross-section of a polymer film on a substrate. The film is composed of several layers, including a top layer of polymer solution, a middle layer of polymer film, and a bottom layer of substrate. The diagram also shows the process of film formation, with arrows indicating the direction of solvent evaporation and the resulting film structure. Labels include 'Polymer solution', 'Polymer film', 'Substrate', and 'Solvent evaporation'.

The diagram shows a reaction vessel containing a solution of a reactant, with a stirrer and a thermometer. The vessel is connected to a gas collection system, which includes a gas syringe and a water trough. The gas syringe is used to measure the volume of gas produced during the reaction. The water trough is used to collect the gas, and the volume of gas is measured by the displacement of water. The diagram also shows a balance scale used to measure the mass of the reactant. The entire setup is placed on a laboratory bench.
